LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF THE WAR

Correspondence of the Associated Press

CAVALLA, Greece, Jan. 25.—What Saloniki was a fortnight ago, Cavalla has become today—the base of the Greek armies in Eastern Macedonia, the military headquarters from which Greece must defend the territory she conquered from Bulgaria two years ago—if it is to be defended.

The quays of the port are cluttered with big guns and their ammunition. The steep, narrow streets are blocked with soldiers. Long trains of mules, laden with the impediments of war, climb the winding ways, between overhanging Turkish houses, bound for Drama, for Sere, for the Bulgarian frontier. For all her removal of soldiers from Saloniki, Greece is not disarming. Nor, judging from the appearance of Cavalla, has she any intention of leaving the rich land she wrested from the Bulgars in the last war in any danger of falling into Bulgarian hands again.

It is easy to understand the Greek desire to keep Cavalla; not that it is really a Greek city, as every Greek is so ready to assert so passionately, for it is far less Greek even than Saloniki. But certainly it is not Bulgarian, either. It is Turkish—Turkish, with a tinge of Saloniki's admixture of Hispano-Portuguese Jewish blood and some slight relic of the Venetian occupation of the middle ages. But being just that, it can readily be turned into Greek, Bulgarian, Serbian or what not in a few years time. The Turkish element is as always infinitely adaptable.

There is no very positive reason why Cavalla and the district it serves should not be Greek. Every smoker of a Turkish cigarette holds between his fingers the reason—from the Greek point of view—why it should. For Cavalla is the port of export for one of the richest tobacco-growing tracts in the world. Not as rich as certain districts of Cuba; but nevertheless exporting over a hundred million drachmae worth of tobacco per annum—more than $20,000,000 worth, with very primitive means of cultivation and shipment.

For there are no railroads out of Cavalla to the plain of Philippi which, from being the battlefield of the army of Marc Anthony, victorious over the armies of Brutus and Cassius in B. C. 42, has become the gateway to the tobacco-growing country of Macedonia. The only way to Drama is by the "Lion," an automobile transformed into a stage coach, which makes daily trips—when the roads permit. And at Drama is the nearest railway connection. To ship the tobacco out of Greece by a Greek port, it must be brought over the mountains on mule back, sewn up in neat little bales.

Nor is the port in its present stage adequate to a proper shipment. The bay of Cavalla is rather an open roadstead than a harbor, though with a little money it could readily be improved. The existing quays are inadequate. Even the smaller ships must lighten their cargoes to and from the shore—a process scarcely calculated to improve the tobacco, which is frequently wet in the course of transference.

The town lies on the skirts of a semi-circle of barren hills that seem to crowd it into the sea. Like so many of the Aegean towns, it bears in its general character the imprint of Venetians. It might be an Italian town—Amalfi, for preference—with its blue and yellow and pink houses, with red-tiled roofs, climbing the steep hillsides in the shadow of the Venetian citadel and the splendid Venetian aqueduct that dominates the city. Only the frequent minarets of the Turkish mosques, and the great many domed edifices built by the Egyptian Moslems mark the Turkish character of the place from afar. The latter was constructed as a free school for orphan boys. Today the same foundation gives hundreds of poor a daily ration of bread and soup.

CONDITION NOT IMPROVED

Mrs. James Ferrara's condition is not improved. It is reported from the Mine Operators' hospital that she is still in a state of lethargy. There is no assurance of her recovery, although she still has a chance for life.

NEW TODAY

Coffee

Roasting makes coffee so porous that its fresh fragrance starts immediately to waste away.

The very hour it is roasted, Schilling's Best is vacuum-sealed in air-tight tins. Flavor-loss between roaster and tin is practically nothing. And the moment the tin is sealed, presto!—all the prime strength of one-hour fresh coffee is held captive for you!

You'll like the economy of such coffee—more good cups to a pound.
